

YCS Institute for Infant and Preschool Mental Health

...is now offering Comprehensive Assessments & Treatment for children (up to 21) affected by Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD)

Are you concerned about your child's development?
Are you or a family member wondering if your child has Autism Spectrum Disorder?

The good news is that a young child's brain is very adaptable to therapy and the earlier a diagnosis is made and treated the better it will be for the child.

The YCS Institute offers

Comprehensive Assessments

- Autism symptoms
- Autism Diagnostic Observation Schedule, 2nd Edition (ADOS-2)
- Cognitive assessment
- Developmental assessment
- Social-emotional functioning
- Adaptive functioning

DIR Floortime Therapy...

...helps caregivers to understand their child's individual differences (such as trauma and sensory differences) and developmental capacities. Therapists use and teach parents how to use their relationship with the child to help the child to relate to others in developmentally and socially appropriate ways.

- Developmental Individual-difference Relationship-based (DIR) model
- Meets the child at his or her developmental level and builds on strengths
- Family therapy emphasizes improving parent-child relationships
- Improves communication

The YCS Institute for Infant and Preschool Mental Health is focused on prevention, early intervention and treatment of behavioral and developmental issues in infants and young children. The Institute is a licensed mental health clinic for children 0-6. Its central tenet is that healthy early relationships are the most effective method to prevent developmental, emotional and behavioral problems later in life. Visit www.ycs.org to learn more
